Dear Warren:

I am looking forward to seeing you when you come to Pasadena. On reconsidering the proposal which I made in my letter, it seems to me too that I was carried away somewhat by my enthusiasm for a new field, and that it would be wise to set up at first a smaller organization and attack the problem more slowly. Our principal need is to get Dan Campbell here, or some similarly well trained immunologist. Campbell, with his interest in chemistry, seems to me to be the best of the younger immunologists for this work.

Sincerely yours,

Linus Pauling
